SPRING, 1886.

It is with pleasure we have to report the receipt of the FIRST SHIPMENTS FOR THIS SEASON.

Notwithstanding the depression which has lately clouded the markets and commercial atmosphere, the prospects of the season appear to have already a brightening aspect, and promising very shortly to clear off entirely the winter of our discontent.

Our advice bears no evidence of the least feeling on the part of our home buyers that anything bordering on depression is in view; on the contrary, our consignments are singularly large and our sales are increasing. The reports of the departments means that in Victoria House there is expected the continuance of that rapid growth in trade which has given us a command over the home

The outlook for this spring business is a bright one, and our hopes have been more than repaid in London. Anyhow, we have a cash crop in possession of a fresh stock to open the season with, which is simply magnificent.

In directing attention to our display, we have the assurance of confidence we have for so many years enjoyed at the hands of a discriminating public, and in the enjoyment of which we look for the further recognition which a new season's trade will ask for.

We offer but brief mention of the many novelties we have just to hand for our leasing departments, and content ourselves with that cordial invitation extended to all buyers to inspect the universal show submitted.

Very truly yours,
We shall be happy to forward

PATTERN'S ON APPLICATION, and these are now being prepared.

COSTUME DEPARTMENT.—Novelties are so numerous in this department that we regard nothing as an innovation, if we speak of the dresses as they are before us. Novelty in colour, novelty in materials, novelty in shapes, novel, perhaps above all, novelty in the trimmings. In colours there is, we find, some spring to the distinct shades in contrast to the tints worn in spring and summer. Perhaps some of them will not meet reception quite so warm as the colour betokeners, but a chance must of course be expected and allowed for at this season.

[illegible]

Figured fancy canvas appears extensively to be worn, at these over scarlet and crimson aural, finished with coral lace and plush trimmings, are amongst the latest novelties. We note also, a trimming on canvas costume, somewhat after the style antique sampler.

We invite early inspection of these novelties in ladies' attire.

HAT-TRIMMING DEPARTMENT.—Charming Garments, quite correct in style, and new are now offering for the Spring, 1886, in Mantles, Mantlets, Fichus, Jackets, Dolmans, &c., for the shapes of last season have been adopted for this, with of course some slight improvements. We are showing some beautiful

IN BLACK LACE such can be made to serve for outdoor wear as the season advances.

MORNING JACKETS will be worn shorter than last Spring, and will be more like full bodices with laques; these are again fully trimmed with lace, and ribbon and bows. We are showing some pretty goods of this class.

In a few days we may enquire; for the present we confine ourselves with simply advising their arrival and soliciting inspection.

DRESS MATERIALS.—The fast would indicate that the one to give a fair description of the modes was for the season in dress materials. The most varied colours are taken into favour, but will be relieved by the colours with which they come in contact. COMBINATIONS are still worn, and are likely to retain, for a time, the first place in Costumes; indeed, one material alone were employed it could scarcely be regarded as fashionable. We note in our early elements the following which may serve as a guide to the materials to be worn.
FRENCH CAMISERIES, in the following colours:

MILLINERY. What is to be worn? What the prevailing colours? The answer to these questions will be easy a becoming; no radical change has found a place, while MATERIALS the new straw lace or straw passementerie will perhaps more worn than anything else. The COLOURS are to be more decided in their character, and will of course be largely those of the last season.

actively used as ornaments, whilst FEATHERS will not be so much in vogue for hats. RIBBONS will not, however, be excluded, although they will find only a good second place in the matter of Millinery Trimmings. Ladies must not be surprised to find velvet worn so much second, simply because, we suppose, velvet has found its way to the favour of the London and Paris modes. However, revived flowers and long loops out of place when care has been bestowed on the choice and disposal.

During the same period all mails were despatched, the longest period of transit being London to Sydney, 64 days, and Sydney to London, The average time from London to Sydney was 37-12-13 days, and from Sydney to London, 38-11-26 days. In view of the termination of the P. and O. Company's contract, it was recommended by the Board of Admiralty in 1888, it was deemed wise to extend the contract with the Orient Company as so to make it run out concurrently with the P. and O. Company's contract, and thus avoid the expense of a new vessel being despatched by the steamer of the P. and O. Company, the longest period occupied by the voyage from London to Sydney having been 63 days, and the shortest 39 days. From 1880 until 1888 the longest time from London had been 43, and the shortest 33 days. The average time from London to Sydney was 37-7-20 days, and from Sydney to London 40 days. On the 1st January 1889, the route between the United Kingdom and Australia, via Suez, has been considered during the year, and resulted in a joint agreement being arrived at between the colonies of New South Wales and Victoria, whereby the Government of the Pacific Mail Service for the year 1888, is £204, 6s. 3d. The net cost per lb. weight of New South Wales mail material conveyed to and from the colony by the P.M.S. respectively, during the year 1888, was as follows:—Pacific net cost per lb. 8-9ths; Orient, 12d. 4-5ths; P. and O., 1d. 9-10ths. The number of letters postpaid at the Colonies, during the year 1888, was 36,995,000; newspapers, 23,693,400; and packets, 3,182,400. Postal cards, 341,000. These returns are largely based upon the plan adopted in the London Post Office, of weighing the letters sent to the Colonies, and the return of the same by the county offices. During the year 229,293 letters in the colony were returned to the writers as unclaimed; and the number of letters received from foreign ports was 1,446,000. The number of letters carried was 7,882,571; books 55,041; newspapers 1,006,183. The number of registered letters which passed through the office during the year 1888, was 1,374,000, 33,605 over the previous year. The number of mails received was as follows:—Inland, 121,476; Foreign, 13,874, showing an increase over 1887 of 37,000. The number of letters sent was 36,995,000, an increase of 17,831; foreign, 1,374,000, an increase of 663, the total number increased passing through the office being 38,369,000, an increase of 17,894 over 1887. The total revenue of the Department for 1888 was £216,171 12s. 6d., and of expenditure, £208,614 4s. 2d., leaving a balance of £27,444 11s. 4d. over the Revenue.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1886.

The collision that has taken place between Government and the authorities of St. Mary's, as to the Orphan Asylum, has been the question of some difficulty. Hitherto the State and the Church have worked either, but the compact has been dissolved, the Church now asserts its right to the control of the land and the buildings. That the position taken up by Cardinal Moran, if we interpret correctly the statement published in our columns yesterday. The case stated therein is entitled to the fullest consideration, and if the Roman Catholic Church can establish its claim, the claim will of course be respected. Denominational and sectarian feeling must be put on one side. It is simply a matter of justice and equity. If the Roman Catholic Church must be treated regarding any rights it may possess just as though it were a Protestant Church, or a secular institution such as a bank. The plain question is whether the State has parted with actual possession of the place. This is a distinct challenge to the Government, which should lose no time in declaring what its answer is to be.

In the multitude of counsellors, the proverb has it, there is safety, and Ministers have now an opportunity of proving the truth of the proverb in connection with the suggestions that have been made for celebrating the first centenary of the colony. Ideas of all sorts have been put forward, and Ministers will make good use of their time if they are prepared by the end of next week, as they say they will be, to submit a satisfactory proposal to Parliament. The Government are quite right in looking to public opinion for guidance, for it is essential, in an affair of national importance such as this, that they should be in thorough accord with the people. They will not have much difficulty, we fancy, in discovering what form of celebration will be most popular, for although views differ in this quarter and that, opinion is apparently settling in pretty strongly in the direction of exhibition. Sir PATRICK JENNINGS seemed to be rather struck with the suggestion made by Sir HENRY PARKES in the Assembly last week that a memorial building should be erected, but the proposal does not appear to have found many advocates, and there is little to recommend it. If it were intended to have an edifice to mark the event, and nothing more, a simple monument would be an appropriate form for it to take. The City Council is erecting a large centennial hall, and another building of the same character is scarcely required. But the occasion demands something better than a monument or a memorial building. We want to show to the world the progress that Australia has made during the first hundred years of its existence, and at claim has the Roman Catholic Church attained so fully and so satisfactorily as by an Exhibition. All the suggestions that the ownership: It is necessary to point out at the beginning that we are only one side of the case, before we are presented by Cardinal MORAN. And as the case presents is not complete, then does he state precisely what is the other side he sets up. The inference to be drawn from his statement is that an absolute title to the property is claimed, and the CARDINAL does not say this in many words. Neither does he submit sufficient evidence to establish a legal claim. He shows that something was done towards transferring a title of some kind, but the proof of any title whatever is wanting.

The statement goes back many years, and refers to a number of grants of land which were made, it is alleged, for the purposes of a Roman Catholic orphanage at Paramatta. Whether the land comprehended in these grants is identical with the land upon which the orphanage is built is not shown; but we may assume this to be the case. The official correspondence quoted by Cardinal MORAN shows that these grants were approved by the Government, and that there was no discrimination as to the character of the exhibitors admitted from abroad, and by placing greater restrictions upon the sale of the title deeds, but that they were actually goods. The importance of Australia as a does not appear from the correspondence. A letter from the Colonial Secretary to the late Archbishop POMERAI, dated 14 December, 1849, notified that the Archbishop had approved of an appropriation of land "inclusive of the additional portion of ground recently granted," and requested that the usual application might be made for title deeds. Another letter, dated 20th January, 1850, called attention to the fact that the application had not been made, and reminded the ARCHBISHOP that "the deeds are not necessarily away the application in connection." There is nothing in the correspondence to show that the application was made, or that the deeds were really issued. CARDINAL MORAN speaks of some later deeds; but nowhere does he say that deeds were issued. It is possible that questions may have arisen as to the conditions of the trust, and if these questions were unanswered, the deeds of course would not issue. Supposing that they did issue, they may have been destroyed with other Church records in the fire of the fires that occurred at St. Mary's; but the field for the products and manufactures of the old world is now so thoroughly appreciated that we could afford to be more particular than we used to be. We might impose much more stringent conditions than were adopted on former occasions, and the proposed appropriation of land would be vacant space in the Exhibition. But this is looking at the question from only one point of view, and not by any means the most important. The Exhibition would, of course, be open to the world, but the main object would be to make an imposing display of Australian products and manufactures. That would be, in fact, the raison d'être of the affair, and the foreign exhibits, although they would increase the attractions of the Exhibition as a show, would be of secondary importance. The idea that what is proposed is an Exhibition of "imported goods and produce" merely, which, seems to be the view taken by the Protection League, is altogether erroneous. Amongst the operative classes generally opinion is not quite unanimous. The Trades and Labour League and the Agricultural and Horticultural League

dinal MORAN, it will be observed, does not approve of an exhibition, and at a meeting held at its instance on Tuesday evening a the Church. All that he does is to submit decision of an intention on the part of the Government to issue them. So far as we have seen, therefore, there is no evidence of a legal case. What may be thought of the equities of the case is another matter. As to that point, a correspondent, whose letter we publish this morning, contends very forcibly that the Church has no moral right to hold the property, for he says:—"Every building upon land has been erected from the State funds, and the cost of maintaining the institution always been wholly borne by the Government, who have paid all salaries and appointed the officials in the usual way. Not a penny of Church money has ever been spent upon this place."

We have yet to learn what answer the Government has to make to the pretensions of the Church. Possibly the Government may not know. Its position must be somewhat in doubt, or Dr. REXWOLD would have been able to make a more definite statement than he was questioned in Parliament the other night. This is a strange thing in itself.

Assuming that an Exhibition of some sort is a foregone conclusion, the question arises, Is it to be a large one, or a small one? Perhaps it ought first to be asked whether an Exhibition on a large scale, coining so soon after the Colonial and Indian Exhibition and the Jubilee Exhibition in Adelaide, would be held with a fair prospect of success? Would it be a wise thing to spend a large sum of money on an affair that might prove a failure? These questions are well worthy of consideration; but it seems to us that if there is to be an Exhibition at all it must be a large one, as large and as imposing as it can possibly be made. If we have an Exhibition, we shall be judged by it; and if it were a poor one, it would have been better for us to have done nothing. A small affair of Government, one would have thought, would fail even as a show. The novelty of Exhibitions has entirely worn off, and unless to know how it stood in a similar line, and it has to confess ignorance as to the position is somewhat embarrassing, in supposing that the title deeds had not been issued, the Government find it difficult to act freely. It can hardly be said that the land is Crown land, which the Government can do as it pleases. In the Land Act of 1884, Crown lands are defined as "lands vested in her Majesty, and not permanently dedicated to any public purpose, or granted, or lawfully contracted to be granted in fee simple." The land at Parramatta has been used for a public purpose for many years, and under these circumstances the Government may find it difficult to deal with it as though it were Crown property pure and simple. The Roman Catholics may be no right to claim it as a possession of the Church; but, on the other hand, a vested interest may be so far established as to limit the authority of the Government. On the matter now stands, it is not easy to form any conclusive opinion concerning it. The Church, has not been stated to be of large proportions and full of attraction people will not go to see them. But it is the ultimate, not the immediate results that are the most important consideration. A large Exhibition will cost more than a small one, of course, but with the former there would be some return for the expenditure, while with the latter the money would be completely thrown away. And unless we are to get something out of an Exhibition, we should scarcely be justified, in the present condition of the finances, in having one at all. However successful it might be, the colony would be largely out of pocket for the first instance; and, if everything were to begin and end with the Exhibition, it would be worse than imprudent to touch the enterprise. But there are to be considered the after results, the influence that a successful Exhibition would be likely to exert upon the future of the colony. Both New South Wales and Victoria spent large sums of money upon their Exhibitions of 1879 and 1880, but the outlay was returned over and h completeness, and we know little about over again in the stimulus that was given and in the introduction of case of the Government Information on latter point should be placed before the public with as little delay as possible, and on the Government has ascertained its opinion, it should act promptly and decisively. Mr. MORAY is sending more children to orphanage, and appears to have taken to trade, and in addition by the display fresh wealth, attracted by the display that was made of Australian products and Australian resources. There can be little doubt that history would repeat itself in our case if we followed in 1888 the plan of 1878. There is this further reason in favour of the most persons, as well as all the fashionable leaders of society. The Queen and Prince of Naples left the Quirinal Palace first at 10 o'clock a.m. in a State carriage, accompanied by two others containing the ladies and gentlemen of honour and the Prince's vic-and water vapour. During a thunderstorm the raindrops formed in the storm-cloud descend vertically to the earth, causing a partial vacuum, which is replaced by air drawn in laterally and from upper layers. The friction caused by this movement is the principal cause of the generation of electricity.—Electricians.
